Volunteer Fireman's Heroism Acknowledged By City Council

Motivated by an heroic act of a volunteer fireman, the city council last night authorized the presentation of awards to employees who have demonstrated outstanding achievement in public service. Mayor Stephen Grant and Fire Chief James R. Belvail stated that on Friday, the day following the act of heroism, the city, in cooperation with the Carmel chapter of the American Red Cross, had set in motion procedure to obtain a Carnegie award in recognition of the bravery of this member of "the city family."

Rescued last Thursday from the rough and numbing ocean by combined efforts of a Carmel volunteer fireman, Bill Hill, the Pacific Grove Rescue Patrol, the U.S. Coast Guard, the Monterey County Sheriff's Office and a helicopter from the U.S. Naval Air Facility was Martha E. Jackson, 25, of Stockton who is studying for a master's degree in psychology at the University of the Pacific.

Newton L.P. Jackson Jr., who is doing work for a Ph.D. degree in psychology at Stockton State Hospital, reported he and his wife were walking hand in hand along the Carmel River Beach. Footing appeared solid, although a little water was flowing over the sand bar at the river mouth when they decided to cross it. Jackson stopped to remove his shoes.

Suddenly, the water was up to his and his wife's waist, then to their necks, "and she was gone," swept to sea by the river current, he said. He fought out of the water and ran to a house above the beach to telephone for aid.

The Carmel Fire Department received the call and Chief James R. Belvail and Battalion Chief Jim Kelsey responded. From the beach, over the department's radio communication system, they asked Fire Captain Bob Updike, at the fire house, if he could call a surfer. Just then Bill Hill entered the fire house in response to the emergency call which he had heard over the radio in the department's pickup truck which he was driving while on duty as a volunteer member of the department during his vacation from studies at the University of Colorado.

He is a surfer, and with Updike, in the pickup rushed to his home to pick up his nine-foot surfboard, then on to the beach where he stripped to his shorts and plunged through the ten-foot surf to reach Mrs. Jackson 300 yards offshore.

"If I don't start to bring her in, call for more aid," he had told Updike. A good swimmer, Mrs. Jackson had been unable to approach the shore because of the strong current which kept carrying her towards the rocks at the north end of the beach. Hill placed her on his board and decided to remain at her side in the rough icy water until more help arrived, rather than attempt to battle the current and the breaking surf with Mrs. Jackson on the board. Members of the Monterey County Sheriff's Office were on the beach also a hundred or so onlookers. Over radio communications systems, rescue units were alerted.

It was half an hour before members of the Pacific Grove Rescue Patrol (McAnaney's Navy), on surfboards, reached Hill and Mrs. Jackson. They strapped her, in a life jacket, to one of the surfboards. All waited for the helicopter from U.S. Naval Air Facility in Monterey.

After several unsuccessful drops because of heavy seas, Hill was lifted from the water in a rescue sling dropped from the helicopter and brought to the beach. On the next trip, Mrs. Jackson was retrieved and met by her husband who anxiously had watched the rescue. Aiding the rescue by this time was a vessel from the U.S. Coast Guard Station in Monterey.

Mrs. Jackson was rushed to the hospital in the Red Cross ambulance operated by members of the Carmel Fire Department. Hill and Jackson were taken to the hospital, too. Hill was released the same evening. Jackson was released on Friday and Mrs. Jackson on Saturday. All were treated for shock and exposure.

On Monday the Jacksons were back in Stockton, "still very tired," they reported to Jackson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Newton L. P. Jackson of Del Rey Oaks whom the young couple had planned to visit for the weekend after they had taken a late afternoon walk on the beach.

Bill Hill, on Monday, was back at the University of Colorado. "He saved our girl's life, she said she was about to give up when Bill arrived," the senior Mrs. Jackson stated.

Her daughter-in-law, soon as she was able, phoned to thank Bill for coming to her aid.

"I hoped someone would come," she said, "but I didn't expect a surfer."

That the surfer did come was the result of instant response by all trained units alerted by Jackson's call for help, also radio communications systems. But they might have been to no avail if 21-year-old Bill Hill had not been on duty as a volunteer fireman; had not possessed a surfer's knowledge of the ocean; or had not been alert enough, or brave enough, to use it.

And justly proud of their son are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hill. M.L.

Mission Tract Annexation Halt

The city council adjourned last night's public hearing on the annexation to the city of 35 lots in the northeast corner of the Mission tract until February 21 at 4 p.m. after presentation of a petition opposing the annexation, signed by 23 property owners in the area requesting annexation. Whitney Reed, spokesman for the opposition, stated the petition represented approximately $151,270 assessed valuation in land and improvements in the area, a sum equal to the more than one-half assessed valuation necessary to kill annexation procedure.

However, by state law, the city can only consider the assessed valuation of land in annexation proceedings. Reed did not have this figure and the value of land alone belonging to the 23 opponents will be checked on the county records by the city to determine whether or not the necessary more than 50 percent of land value is represented by signers of the petition.

Between now and February 21, opponents may withdraw, or proponents change their minds, on the annexation, City Attorney William B. Burleigh pointed out.

If, following checking, and there is no change in the ratio of opponents to proponents on February 21, the council must, by state law, terminate annexation proceedings providing the assessed value of opponents' land exceeds the assessed value of land owned by proponents.

THIS IS BOY SCOUT WEEK

Seen signing up for a week at Boy Scout Camp Pico Blanco this summer are, left to right, Mark Neeson, Paul Shabram, Kent Murtland, Tom Pelton and Brian Smith, all members of Carmel Boy Scout Troop 32, sponsored by the Carmel Rotary Club. Troop leader is Commander Robert Pelton. Rotary member responsible for the club's Boy Scout project is Mervin R. Sutton. Troop 32 meets once a week at the Carmel Boy Scout House, held in trust by Carmel American Legion Post 512, which sponsors Carmel Boy Scout Troop 86 of which John Martin is leader. Both troops have an overnight campout once a month. They support themselves with ten cents a meeting dues and fund raising activities such as paper drives, car washes and a pancake breakfast.

"The Scout movement aims for a high standard of citizenship, character, and physical fitness for every American boy, stresses Mervin Sutton, "it works towards this aim by making boys able to do things for themselves; by training them in scoutcraft; by teaching them patriotism, courage, self-reliance and other high ideals expressed in the Boy Scout Oath and Law, to which every Scout pledges himself.

Where Can City Dump Its Trash?

"I've spoiled your evening," said Commissioner of Public Works Herbert Blanks after the rest of the city council had heard his report last night stating that a new dump site must be found by the end of 1967 to accommodate the daily accumulation of 40 tons of earth, sweepings, tree cuttings and miscellaneous debris which will fill the present dump site in the canyon below Forest Hill Park by the end of 1967. The street sweepings in the city contribute 31½-36 tons of this amount each day and do not include trash which is collected by the Roscelli Corporation.

Were the daily 40 tons of dump material transported to the new Peninsula dump site at the Salinas River, the cost would be $46,745 the first year, or 24.5 cents per $100 on the tax rate, and $31,256 per year thereafter, or 16.5 cents on the tax rate, his report stressed. Included in this sum would be acquisition of additional street department equipment and personnel to handle hauling.

Other solutions to the dump problem suggested in Blanks' report were (a) increase the present dump site by acquisition of additional area; (b) lease or acquire a new dump site beyond operating range of the present city equipment and acquire additional equipment and personnel to handle hauling to such a site; (c) lease or acquire a new site within operating range of present equipment which could eventually be used as a permanent corporation yard site.

Blanks recommended the last proposal and that a committee of the council be directed to explore possible sites in this category, also cost of acquisition and means of financing such a dump site. The council adopted his report and referred the matter to its committee on lands and improvements.

Bach Aria Group Gave Royal Fare To Carmel Audience On Saturday

by John Upton

In a way, we approach each new Carmel Music Society concert with some trepidation. The calibre of the artists has been so high this season that after each performance we have come away thinking. "This is going to be a hard act to follow."

It is gratifying, therefore, after having heard the Bach Aria Group at Sunset auditorium Saturday evening, to report that we had nothing to worry about. This scholarly and dedicated band of musicians and singers gave us royal fare indeed, at an artistic level easily the equal of that of their predecessors Regine Crespin and John Browning.

In a program of arias, recitatives, and chorales from the Bach church cantatas, the troupe reaffirmed a thesis held by many musicologists: that Bach was impatient with the shortcomings of the human voice as a musical element, and made use of it probably only under pressure. This was particularly evident in many of the voice and single instrument duets with continuo, where the composer, with merciless impartiality, assigned some of the most difficult embellishments to the singer. ("If my musicians can play it, Fraulein, why can't you sing it?")

It was soprano Janice Harsanyi, with her impeccable intonation and total devotion to using her voice as a musical instrument, who showed us most clearly what Bach probably had in mind. She made no attempt to enunciate the words of the German text, nor to sing with "expression." Throughout the lovely aria from Cantata 115, for soprano, flute, cello, and continuo, she was everywhere on equal footing with the musicians, and displayed a fine sense of contrapuntal balance. Cellist Bernard Greenhouse, busy with some beautifully executed upper-register passages that would have demanded most musicians' complete attention, occasionally threw her an admiring glance.

The other singers—alto Maureen Forrester, tenor Richard Lewis, and bass-baritone Norman Farrow—did not seem to understand the problem as well as Miss Harsanyi. All have highly-trained, opulent voices, but they apparently found it harder to think of themselves as musical components rather than as soloists. Their insistence upon communicating the lyrics, which are rather commonplace in these cantatas, was a bit pointless and in some cases detrimental to intonation and to the transparency of Bach's contrapuntal writing.

One of the happy exceptions was Farrow's admirable singing in the recitative and arioso from Cantata 60, for alto, bass, and continuo, where his sustained tones soared in a most majestic way, as if played on some huge stringed instrument.

Members of the Bach Aria Group's instrumental ensemble performed superbly Saturday; individually they are such consummate musicians that they are probably incapable of performing any other way. In particular, we admired oboist Robert Bloom, who gave the lie to the notion, common even among musicians, that his instrument is impossible to play in tune. Not only does he play with dead-center intonation, but he produces a round, fat tone that must be the despair of woodwind players on two continents.

Cellist Bernard Greenhouse, who with pianist Paul Ulanowsky was in charge of the unrelenting continuo, is the central pillar in this baroque structure; not only does his instrument speak with the greatest voice and at the center of gravity of Bach's music, but in addition he is one of the finest cellists it has ever been our privilege to hear.

Samuel Baron, flautist, and Oscar Shumsky, violinist, are, like their confreres, first-rate players. They do not stand out in our memory, I suppose, because we EXPECT violin and flute players to be good. Baron was particularly nimble in the aria from Cantata 94, where he carried on a spirited musical dialogue with Miss Forrester.

Most of us in Saturday evening's audience had one fault to find with the program: a certain monotony, a kind of too much of a good thing. While Bach is surely one of the most inventive, varied and imaginative of all composers, his vocal music has a rather narrow spectrum; after the first half-hour each aria began to sound very much like the preceding one. The three chorales were a welcome diversion, but coming as they did at the end of the evening, they were less effective than they might have been.

It is our suggestion that the group should utilize the formidable talents of its musicians, individually and in ensemble, to add variety and pace to its presentation. I would have given a great deal to hear, for example, Greenhouse play the gavotte from Bach's Sixth Violoncello Suite, or Baron's flute in the lovely, skipping counter melody of "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring." Surely this would not be a betrayal of the Bach Aria Group's purpose; in fact, a little of this kind of eclecticism might merely enhance the inherent beauty of the church cantatas.

In any event, this was a minor flaw in a rewarding evening, and our faith in the Carmel Music Society remains unshaken. Now we are looking forward with pleasure to the Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra, due to appear in these purlieus on February 23.

There's only one thing.

The Bach Aria Group is going to be a hard act to follow.

Studio's 'Catch Me If You Can' Has Funny, Very Complicated Plot

by Duke Everts

"Catch Me If You Can!" is the current attraction at the Studio Theatre and Restaurant. A mystery-comedy in three acts, written by Jack Weinstock and Willie Gilbert as an adaptation of the French version, it has the most complicated plot of any play we've ever seen. We wouldn't even try to explain it. It is very funny, however, notwithstanding everything it has against it.

The story revolves around Daniel Corban and the search for his new bride who seems to have disappeared in thin air. Corban is portrayed by Jim Jordan who is somewhat tense in his portrayal. A little too dramatic, but enjoyable never-the-less.

A young girl shows up in a little mountain lovenest in the Catskills claiming to be the new bride of Corban who hotly denies this and, naturally, the rest of the people connected with the situation think he is some kind of nut. Carolyn Evans, a fine, polished, accomplished actress, who has a laugh that made us dislike her immediately, portrays Elizabeth Corban.

Inspector Levine, is portrayed by Bob Lotz. He starts out rather slowly in the first act but picks it up in the second. His accent is very authentic. He never dropped it once. This is difficult if one is not familiar with Jewish dialect. Most actors tend to overdo it. Not Mr. Lotz.

Father Keller, a Catholic priest, is ably enacted by James Lancina in his first acting role. He is good despite his nervousness. A few more plays under his belt and he will show up some of our local talent.

We reserve this last paragraph concerning fine talent for Neil Kaye who portrays a sandwich shop proprietor named Sydney. He alone is worth the price of admission. That is not to say that the rest aren't. Such an actor, he is. Kaye understands Sydney perfectly. We enjoyed him very much and it's too bad that his part is so small. We are looking forward to seeing him in much more local little theatre.

We've never seen a bad set at the Studio and this one doesn't ruin its reputation. Except for one little flaw — when someone warmed his hands on a stove that had no fire — the set was done to perfection.

Under the proficient direction of Michael Keller, "Catch Me If You Can" should have a long, comfortable run with well filled houses.

In the vernacular of the play, an Agatha Christie, it ain't. A good comedy, it is.

Guess what we've discovered local theatre-goers have been waiting for? A mystery play, that's what. Not just any mystery, mind you, but a spine-tingling, double-surprise-ending mystery with enough comedy touches to lighten a sinister and diabolical plot. In other words, "Catch Me If You Can," the fiendishly clever drama we offer each Friday, Saturday and Sunday night. What makes us so sure? Why, the packed houses, generous applause and gasps of disbelief at last weekend's opening. If you were there, please don't reveal the climax! Let's be fair to the hundreds planning to attend this weekend (we hope). All this excitement at $2.75 for the show alone or $5.50 with our roast beef, corned beef or baked ham dinner. Don't miss it!

True Carmelites Value Individuality Above All

by Margot Hyatt

There is no more individual a person that a true Carmelite, whether he has always lived here or whether he has arrived more recently because he just wasn't comfortable anyplace else.

Even though he clings passionately to the village aspects of Carmel, he is by no means provincial. He is glad there is no heavy industry here or any large retail outlets even though it means his taxes are a trifle larger.

If he is lucky enough to be able to live here while his children are young, he is usually drawn by the hope that here school classes will be small, so that his child will be able to develop his individuality and his unique capabilities in this village where creativity is so highly appreciated.

He is positive that, in an enlightened community like Carmel, only the most efficient and experienced educators will be chosen to administer a program which includes highly qualified teachers, also the latest in tested methods and technical equipment consistent with the age we live in.

Does he find what he had a right to expect? Well not quite.

A few years ago the Carmel Unified School District hired a nationally known educator to introduce the latest successful teaching methods as tested all over the country. He was dedicated to the proposition that the rare teaching personality, the specialist in a field who is willing to take more responsibility for planning, should be exposed to as many children as possible and be paid accordingly.

He also was dedicated to the idea that each individual child should proceed at his own rate. For example, if he were capable of doing more difficult work in reading, he could enter an advanced group and not be held back by his grade level.

Perhaps he tried to do too much too quickly. A 70 cent tax override failed. It would have implemented this philosophy, paid for badly needed school repairs and maintenance, bought visual aid equipment capable of competing with TV, paid for library books and assistance, also countless other aids to learning. Worst of all, because of the override failure, personnel had to be cut which meant larger class loads for teachers.

How have parents at Carmel River School reacted to this emergency? Most mothers with the spare time have been willing to pitch in and help out in the library, to act as teacher aides, to supervise the playgrounds and cafeteria so that teachers can rest at lunchtime.

Fathers have been coming out on Saturdays to help with grounds maintenance, to build fences around outdoor classrooms and to reseed lawns. This aided the decreased maintenance staff.

As I visited classes at Carmel River School in preparation for doing substitute work, the words of David Erskine, its principal, constantly came to life: "A teachable moment, well met, is the essence of education . . ."

For example, in the literature class conducted in the library they were talking about fables. One boy said a fable was usually about animals, but Betsy Green remembered the one about the bundle of sticks which couldn't be broken. (Betsy is a little girl who was a beginner last year who is now doing 4th grade work). "Not just sticks, but people are stronger when they work together," observed Mr. Erskine, "that's what makes our country strong."

It took me back to my childhood to hear the sounds of letters being stressed in Sara Leidig's reading and spelling class. These boys and girls can more easily figure out a new word than those who used to be limited to the vocabulary they had learned by sight method. Her students do much of their work on their own in the Sullivan Programed Reading workbooks in which the correct answers are hidden until they have answered questions about the brightly illustrated text.

When I visited Claire Duygou's class in beginning reading they were using the Phonovisual chart on which pictures are associated with sounds of letters and words. Most exciting from the creative point of view are the little booklets in which the children illustrate the stories they tell Mrs. Duygou as she takes them down on the typewriter.

Mrs. Dorothy Schlote's beginners are using still another method of reading instruction, the Lippencott Basal readers with filmstrips and workbooks, in which families of words with similar endings are introduced. Her class achieved well beyond 3rd grade level using this method.

There needs to be another class for the perceptually handicapped, like Shirley Taylor's, which is limited to 15. Mrs. Taylor is a gentle person who uses all sorts of concrete and colorful techniques to aid these children. Each has a problem, of balance, of vision, perhaps of maturity, which can be helped if each is given enough patient individual attention. These children demand far more of a regular classroom teacher's time than it is fair to the rest of the class for her to give.

I dropped into Marcia Devoe's kindergarten. Here again I noticed the Phonovisual chart which she said she uses in speech work, but which doubles for reading readiness. I poked my head in the door of Sally Harkins kindergarten where she was explaining squares using pictures. All is not play in kindergarten. Important work is done at this level in getting the children ready for reading and math, in teaching them to listen, to follow instructions, to take turns expressing themselves, and so on.

Everything at River School is geared for the individual child who is encouraged to progress at his own rate. Teachers work together cooperatively. While classes are not yet huge, they have been a lot smaller, and projected enrollment demands the reinstatement of personnel cut last year.

Carmel River School offers its children a program which stimulates them to want to read and write meaningfully. It introduces math in such a way that children are prepared for algebra and geometry—the scientific age at every step along the way. They are encouraged to talk well, and to listen, just as important for good conversation. They learn about far away places.

It is not surprising that prideful Carmel citizens are eager to pitch in at River School and make their contribution to the future generation which will carry on the city's traditions. They do this in a number of different ways: by volun- their time to aid the teachers and librarian, by turning out on Saturday mornings to help create a lovely setting for their school, by forming committees to call on neighbors who need more complete information before they vote on the proposed 37 cent tax override on March 7.

As Principal David Erskine would say, "Even Carmel individuals are stronger when they work together."

CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

Above are Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Grimshaw, Carmelites since 1922, who recently celebrated their 57th wedding anniversary. They were married in Beaver, Utah, on January 1, 1910.

The Grimshaws came to Carmel in December of 1922 just to spend the winter, but they stayed, and Mr. Grimshaw started working for M. J. Murphy as a cabinet maker. In 1931, Arnold Grimshaw became the owner of the Tidewater gas station at San Carlos and Sixth and worked there until he retired in 1963. After 32 years of helping people with their cars and problems he is now enjoying his home on Mission Street between Third and Fourth avenues where he and his wife have lived since 1937.

The Grimshaws have two sons, Charles and Maurice, who both grew up here and attended schools in Carmel and Monterey, also three grandchildren, Charles, Jr. of Carmel, Patrick of Pacific Grove and Lucene who is living in Florida. They also have nine great-grandchildren.

To celebrate their 57th anniversary, Myrtle and Arnold Grimshaw went to visit Mrs. Grimshaw's sister in Arcadia and, to make the event really special, attended the Rose Bowl Parade which they both enjoyed a great deal.

Pine Needles

TO MARRY IN MALAYSIA

Wedding plans that sound like "Tales of the Arabian Nights" are in the offing for Linda Stager and Chester Skibinski. Linda, who was a 1960 graduate of Carmel High School and a 1965 graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, went into the Peace Corps after she received her degree and has been teaching English on Phuket Island off the coast of Thailand for the past two years.

Linda, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Stager of Carmel, met her future husband while they were training for the Peace Corps in the Hawaiian Islands. They were both sent to Phuket where they have been teaching the children of the island.

Mrs. Ruth Caine of Carmel, Linda's grandmother, will be leaving this Sunday for Bangkok where she will be met by Linda on February 14. As the wedding will not take place until March 10, Mrs. Caine will help Linda get ready for the event while being shown around the country by her enthusiastic granddaughter.

After the wedding that will take place in Penang, Malaysia, the young couple will fly to Singapore, New Delhi, Cairo, spend a month on the Greek Islands and then go to Rome.

London will be the next stop for Linda and Chet and he will attend the University of London where he will study for his master's degree in English. Linda hopes to teach at a school in London and Mr. and Mrs. Stager will visit them there when they are settled in their new home. Chet's father Mr. Skibinski, who lives in Boston will also be visiting them in London while his mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Spencer who live in Long Beach, will wait until Linda and Chet come back to the United States to see them.

Wendy Visits Parents

The former Wendy Draper, now Mrs. Clifford Ograin of Hilo, Hawaii, has been in town with her husband since last Wednesday visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Draper. Everyone in the family is delighted as they have not seen Wendy or Cliff for almost two years. The young couple plans to spend this weekend here and then go to Southern California where Cliff will attend meetings of Shell Oil Company, for which he works.

Second Son

A happy addition was made to the family of Mr. and Mrs. John Nottenkamper of Sycamore Place when they welcomed home Christopher Todd who was born January 31. Brother David, who is four, was pleased to have a new playmate and is already making plans as to what they will do when Christopher is old enough to "really play." Proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Leo Nottenkamper of Pacific Grove and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Ferrante of Monterey.

Asked To Translate Book

John H. Livingstone, noted Carmel photographer, is back after attending the University of Santa Barbara for the past year to obtain his master's degree in Spanish.

An honor that has come John's way lately is that he was selected out of the entire country by Don Fernando Diaz Plaja, well known Spanish professor at both the University of Madrid and Barcelona, to translate into English Plaja's book which will be a biography on the life of El Greco. Although John does not know if he will do the translation, the fact is that in the past few months he has had both a poem and a short story produced by Thrust, a magazine which is published in Southern California, and this may lead him into spending more of his time in literary endeavors.

John, who is now living in Carmel Meadows, is again involved with his longtime love affair with the Monterey Peninsula using his camera lens to give vent to his feelings. He is also tutoring in Spanish and, of course, continuing in his new field of writing.

January Baby

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Smithson started the new year in just the right way when they brought home from Community Hospital their first child, a little girl named Olive Ruth, who was born on January 30. "She is the prettiest baby and so good," Lucile said, "and Ted is just delighted with her." Mrs. Olive Conklin who lives in Saint John's, Michigan, and Mrs. Anna Carlock of Inglewood are the happy grandmothers.

Mrs. Doney Parker received a visit last weekend from her daughter, Diana Knight, who is now a stewardess with United Airlines. She graduated from the airlines' school two weeks ago and this was her first trip home since embarking on a flying career.

Diana, who was in her senior year at the University of California at Santa Barbara, decided to join the airlines to see some of the world and so far has enjoyed the experience. She is based in New York City where she lives with seven other girls who are also with United Airlines.

The new stewardess, who speaks five languages, hopes to be able to go abroad and do some painting, in which she is very interested. With her new job she may very well realize her wish.

NEW STEWARDESS

Pilgrimage At Ninety

Mrs. Nell R. Applegate, who is approaching her 90th birthday, leaves Monday on a nine-day pilgrimage to the world center of the Baha'i faith in Haifa, Israel. Mrs. Applegate will be accompanied by a young friend, Norbert Kammer, also a member of the faith. Their journey will be made by plane and, before returning to Carmel, the pilgrims hope to visit the Sea of Galilee and other shrines of the founders of their faith. Only Baha'i members may make pilgrimages such as Mrs. Applegate embarks upon next week and there is a long waiting list of applicants. Mr. Kammer offered to give up his place on this list so that Mrs. Applegate, whose name was farther down the list, could go sooner. He also stated they would be ready to start at short notice, should cancellations occur. On Wednesday of last week, a cablegram informed them that, could they go on Monday of next week, space was available.

The fact that they can travel together is fortuitous, because Mrs. Applegate is blind.

PLANS FEBRUARY WEDDING

Phyllis Clayton of Carmel will wed Albert Morris Liston on February 25 in All Saints' Episcopal Church. Phyllis is a 1960 graduate of Carmel High School and received her B.A. degree and teaching credentials from the University of California, Davis, in 1964.

Steve Hoppers Visit

Mrs. Jane Vial had a full house over this past weekend with her nephew, Steve Hopper, and his wife, Rosalie, paying her a visit. Steve is the son of Dr. James Hopper of Sausalito. One of the days was spent at Point Lobos State Reserve where Steve showed Rosalie this beautiful area for the first time. Everyone had a wonderful time and the Hoppers hope to spend more time here in the future.

Bells First Child

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bell recently had their first child, a little girl named Michelle Joyce who was born January 25 at the Community Hospital. Mrs. Anna Ward of Monterey is her maternal grandmother and Mrs. Amelia Bell of Mill Valley is her paternal grandmother. Her father, who is the vice-president of the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, thinks that Michelle is beautiful, a view echoed by his happy wife.

PARTY PLANS . . .

By Phyllis Jervey

PRE-CINEMA FRENCH SUPPER

You'll have to be nimble on your feet to serve an epicurean French supper before "Footloose in France" on February 17, the date of the first film in the 1967 Explorerama series. A grand tour of France from Paris to the beautiful Cote d'Azur will be screened.

We have chosen fish as the piece de resistance for our French supper since we are now in the Lenten season. Let's get into the French spirit by serving aperitifs such as Vermouth Cassis, Dubonnet, San Rafael.

Then comes either Lobster Thermidor with relishes, hard rolls and a green salad, or make the main dish a French Fish Fillet specialty. We describe both of these in detail.

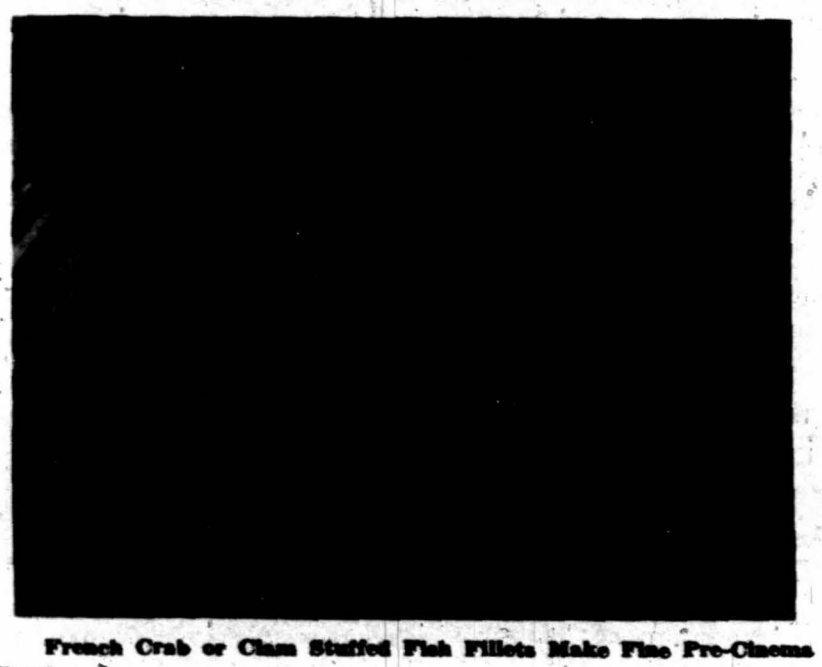
Dessert should be purchased at one of the Peninsula's many fine pastry shops or have a tray of cheeses, such as Port Salut, Camembert or Brie, served with apples or pears. Black coffee, and perhaps a liqueur, but keep the whole supper very simple. You'll want a light dinner wine and remember that the cinema starts on time!

The origin of Lobster Thermidor is somewhat obscure. According to legend, this dish was created for Napoleon by his master chef who named it Langouste a la Napoleon. Many think that the Emperor changed the name to Thermidor for the eleventh month of the First French Republic. The glamorous but easy crab or clam stuffed fillets are delicious in "sandwich" form, that is, the dressing is between two fish fillets, or these are rolled around the dressing. Either way can be prepared ahead, refrigerated then reheated before serving—a boon to the working gal.

Langouste a la Napoleon
(Lobster Thermidor)

Six (about 8 oz., each) lobster tails; 1/3 cup butter; 2 tsps. minced shallot or green Spring onion (white part); 3 tbsps. flour; salt and white pepper to taste; 1 tbsp. lemon juice; 1/3 cup dry Vermouth; 2 cups light cream; 3 egg yolks (very freshest); parsley or watercress sprigs for decoration.

Place lobster tails, either thawed or frozen, into large kettle of boiling salted water (1 tsp. salt to 1 qt. water). When water reboils, lower heat and boil thawed tails gently 1 minute longer than their individual weight in ounces. If tails are frozen, add 2 minutes more. Drain. Drench tails with cold water. Using scissors, cut lengthwise through center of membrane covering meat. Pull this flesh out, dice and chill. Save lobster shells. Melt butter in saucepan; add shallot and cook until tender but not brown. Remove from heat and stir in flour, salt and pepper. Then blend in mixture of lemon juice and Vermouth; stir to blend. Stir in light cream and return to pan to heat. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add a little of the hot mixture to beaten egg yolks, then stir them into sauce. Add lobster meat and continue cooking until lobster is heated through. Do not let sauce boil. Spoon into lobster shells and serve immediately. Makes 6 servings.



French Crab or Clam Stuffed Fish Fillets Make Fine Pre-Cinema Fare.

French Crab
or
Clam-Stuffed Fish Fillets

Two (1 lb. each) packages halibut or flounder fillets, or 2 lbs. fresh fish; 2 cans crab meat, or same amount of fresh crab, or 2 cans minced clams; ½ cup butter; ¼ cup chopped shallot or green onion; ¼ cup chopped celery; 4 cups cubed bread; 2 tbsps. lemon juice; salt and pepper.

If using frozen fish, let it thaw on refrigerator shelf or at room temperature. Arrange half of fillets close together in buttered baking dish. Drain canned crab, remove any fibres and flake; or drain minced clams, reserving liquid. Melt butter in skillet. Pour off about half of butter and save. To butter in skillet add shallot and celery and cook until tender but not brown. Stir in bread cubes (packaged ones are easiest) until butter is soaked up. Continue tossing cubes until they brown slightly. Stir in crab flakes or minced clams, lemon juice and enough white wine or clam juice to moisten. Season to taste with salt and white pepper. Spoon filling over fillets and cover with remaining fillets. Brush with reserved butter. Bake at 375 F. for about 20 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested lightly with fork prongs. Serve in baking dish. If you prefer rolling the fillets around the stuffing, as shown in accompanying picture, add a Veloute or Bechamel sauce.

Sauce Veloute (Velvet sauce)

Three tbsps. butter; 3 tbsps. flour; ¼ tsp. salt; ⅛ tsp. white pepper; 1½ cups fish stock made from fish trimming, or use diluted bottled or canned clam juice; grating of whole nutmeg.

Melt the butter in saucepan over low heat; stir in until well blended a mixture of the flour, salt and pepper. Heat until mixture bubbles. Watch carefully and remove from heat. Gradually stir in ½ cup of the fish or clam stock. Return to heat and bring rapidly to boiling, stirring constantly. Cook 2 minutes longer. Blend in gradually the rest of the cold stock. Boil briefly until thick and smooth. Stir in grated nutmeg.

Bechamel Sauce

Follow above recipe but substitute ¾ cup cream for ¾ cup of the stock. Stir in 1 tbsp. minced shallot or onion. Serve these sauces very hot but never boil. For extra eclat try decorating dish with seedless green grapes or toasted slivered almonds.

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

Several of the women's magazines publish annual volumes on some phase of homemaking and this week we have four new ones. From House Beautiful comes a HOME REMODELING book, full of pictures and directions, and good advice. One of the loveliest houses in the book was made from an old stone barn. Let's all go barn hunting some day! House Beautiful also has a HOME DECORATING book. Better Homes and Gardens has published its HOME FURNISHING IDEAS, 1967, and House and Garden has a new DECORATING GUIDE. These books with their beautiful illustrations will make you hate your own house and fly to the nearest home furnishing shop to start all over again.

Buying cookbooks is like eating popcorn, one merely leads to another and there is no stopping. Comes now COOKING PLAIN AND FANCY by Lois Katzenbach. The introduction was done by Katherine Cornell who bolsters her love of Mrs. Katzenbach's cooking by quoting a little Shakespeare, as follows:

"other women cloy the appetites they feed,
but she makes hungry where most she satisfies"

The entire Katzenbach family helps in the making of a cookbook, some cooking, some eating and testing, all giving heartfelt opinions. This is a real family cookbook! Their picture is on the back cover, cooking and eating and having fun.

THE TECHNIQUE OF WEAVING is by John Tovey, and is designed for both the beginning weaver and the more advanced. This is an English publication but in the list of suppliers, both British and American are shown. The book has so many pictures that even if the casual reader is alarmed by the weavers' vocabulary he can consult the pictures and go ahead with his weaving project.

Two new books on Ireland, that green land to which tourists are now pouring in great numbers. So first let us speak a word for IRELAND EXPLORED by Wolfgang Retler, a man who came to Ireland with an open mind and a way with words. There are beautiful photographs and short commentaries to go with them. This is a book for the person who plans to visit Ireland. The second book is by Redmond Fitzgerald and is entitled CRY BLOOD, CRY ERIN. It is the story of the fight for the Irish Republic, which began in 1916 and still seems to be going on today. On Saint Patrick's Day in 1966 someone blew up the statue of Lord Nelson in Dublin.

THE SUN KING by Nancy Mitford is the life story of Louis XIV who reigned for a longer period than any other ruler in the history of France. Miss Mitford's book covers 54 years of the life of the king, from the time he decided to transform his father's hunting lodge into a palace, until his death there so many years later. The grandeur of the French Court is reflected in the make-up of the book with its lavish illustrations, many of which are in color. There is a good index which includes a listing of the plates. A beautiful book, well written, and well worth your reading.

For a laugh or a chuckle, read PHYLLIS DILLER'S HOUSEKEEPING HINTS. There are hints on housekeeping, cooking, entertaining, children, saving money, and a great many other things about which the author knows absolutely nothing and tells it in such a funny manner you find yourself convulsed with laughter.

One of the many beautiful sights to be visited during the Explorer's Tour of Central Asia.

Explorer's Tour Of Central Asia

Bob McGinnis is constantly besieged by clients who ask, "Where can we go, we've been everywhere?" His answer to the question can be best described by the following Explorer's Tour of Central Asia that leaves in July of this year under the leadership of Dr. John D. Hoag.

The tour, by plane, goes first to Leningrad and Moscow, two great cities of fabulous museums, galleries, churches and examples of impressive ancient and new architecture.

Next is Mongolia where the time has passed when the explorer traveled on horseback or by cart from the Siberian Irkutsk along Lake Baikai, or by camel caravan from the Great Wall of China through the endless Gobi Desert into difficult-to-reach Mongolia. Today automobiles, driven by former lamas, and women in colorful Mongol costumes, rush through the the streets of Ulan Bator, stopping at the gleaming white government buildings, the fine theatre, modern department stores, the Mongol University or the scientific institutions of which there are many.

The high mountains of the Altai Range, the steppes with millions of spice-scented flowers, the dust clouds behind the large herds of roaming horses, the yurts which dot the landscape — this is the Mongolia of the romantic dreams of our youth — the lost cities of Genghis and Kublai Khan, the way of life of the nomadic Mongol, his customs, clothing, religion and art.

The tour goes on to the Gobi Desert where there are no airfields but the desert floor is hard and the plane lands right in front of yurts in what appears to be the middle of nothing. During the planned days in the Gobi, there are the encampments of nomads with their herds of horses, camels (the two-humped variety), goats, sheep and yaks. The hospitality is overwhelming. At each camp one meets the entire family—from the grandmother down to the infant born only a few days before. Cheese and bread is offered and the visitor is not a success unless he accepts the offered kumiss, which tastes something like buttermilk thinned with champagne.

By air the tour continues to Irkutsk, a city of about 400,000, and Khabarovsk, of which few have heard. Irkutsk is the cultural center of eastern Siberia, giving up to the traditions of past centuries. Nearby is Lake Baikai, the deepest and most picturesque lake in the Soviet Union. Of the 1,800 plants and animals in the lake area, some are of the same kind that are found in the Arctic Sea.

Next from Irkutsk to Bratsk, where is located one of the largest hydro-electric developments on the Angara River. This river is Lake Baikai's only outlet while some 300 streams and rivers feed into it.

After visiting the cities of Alma Ata, Tashkent, Bukhara and Samarkand, the next country visited is Afghanistan and specifically the capital city of Kabul. The highlight of this is the drive to Bamiyan which is a little known town and one of the great beauty spots of the world, noted for its two great Buddha statues about 150 feet high.

Finally the tour goes into Pakistan, Tehran, Lebanon with an emphasis on art, architecture and the countryside, before leaving for home.

Bob has a limited number of brochures on this Explorer's Tour of Central Asia but he'll gladly get more copies for Pine Cone readers should they want to learn more about a part of the world the jaded traveler seldom travels.

Iran... Where Sheep Take Taxis

by Betty Patchin Greene

"Baah, baah!" said the bright red sheep indignantly from the back seat of a taxicab outside the bazaar. Freshly hennaed that morning, it now had been brought to market at the end of the Maidan-e-Shah, the Great Square of Isfahan.

But sheep are incidental, invisible unless stumbled upon, "great" being an accurate term for the Maidan. It is a giant among piazzas conceived by a giant among art patrons, the Persian Shah Abbas, contemporary of Elizabeth I and spiritual brother to the Medici. Isfahan was his town in the very personal way Florence was the Medici's. It would seem that city planning by autocrats of taste is not such a bad thing.

At one end of the open sweep stands the Masjed-e-Juma — the Blue Mosque—blue dome and minaret against a bluer sky, surely one of the most photogenic buildings in the world. At the other end, the endless intricacies of the covered bazaar and, such is the distance, that sacred and profane seem cities apart. A third of the way down stands a grandstand of surpassing elegance from which the Shah and his court once watched polo games. Just opposite is the Shaikh Lotfallah Mosque, a most exquisite smaller building, once reserved for the worship of royal ladies.

Isfahan boasts varied other treasures. The Madressah Char Bagh, where twin minarets soar above a peaceful courtyard, has the added attraction of being a religious school, with turbaned mullahs padding about. Shah Abbas' pleasure pavilion is set in a charming park, the interior garnished with frescoes of the monarch and his companions decidedly at play. And, in contrast to all this sophistication, the 1,000-year old "Friday Mosque" is a fine simple brick building typical of Puritan Islam.

Isfahan further recalls Florence —a place of dome and tower, river and ancient bridges, gardens behind walls—and, pre-eminently, a city of craftsmen, creators of portable beauty. Metalware, rugs, ceramics, textiles, inlay, minatures and glass old and new at remarkably reasonable prices tempt one who belongs (and what one does not?) to the school of travel that fancies culture plus shopping.

Isfahan to Shiraz and Persepolis is an easy flight. Shiraz is a pleasant garden city famous for wine and poets, the latter having been very fond of the former.

Persepolis, about one hour's drive from Shiraz, was the Spring capital of an empire that stretched from Egypt to India. Building began under Darius in the 5th century B. C. and was carried on by his descendants until the burning of the city by Alexander the Great during what must have been the ancestor of all wild parties.

Time, earthquake and pillage have done their work, yet what marvels are left in this high, horizon-encircled ruin! Mighty winged bulls and lions, double-headed eagles, giant stone heads. And, above all, the bas-reliefs spin a wondrous tale: long processions of warriors, captives and beasts marching forever into the past, bearing tribute to the King of Kings.

The surrounding country is not true desert but grazing land, green in Spring and alive with nomads. Black tents scattered everywhere, drifting flocks, strings of camels, mounted figures move across the hills and plain. This is Quashgai country, the women do not veil and, unlike the Bedu, they are an approachable people.

We came across a rag-bag section of the tribe in tattered tents with donkeys by the dozen. Richer tribal units have finer equipment and stock, some even travel with teachers for the children. Ours were camped in a little meadow under the immense relief of the Emperor Valerian bending his proud Roman knee before the Persian conquerer.

For some of us the camp was even more interesting than the ruins and considerably easier to get to. There was a fascination in meeting the friendly, dirty, noisy lot, living an ancient life unchanged—we happily agreed—by anything more modern than the wheel.

Of course, like most people who are very poor they wanted something and knew what they wanted —chewing gum.

I have been to Iran (Persia) twice and recommend it highly to travellers looking for something a bit off the beaten track but not too inconvenient. There is good international air service into Teheran and internally Iranian airlines are excellent. Hotels ranged from very good to just passable but the fascination of the country compensated for minor discomforts.

Food is Middle Eastern except in a few Teheran restaurants—pilaffs, shish-kebabs, various vegetable mixtures—I happen to like it very much. Although a Muslim country, alcohol is available.

Iran is highly photogenic and people are friendly but one should be very careful about taking pictures of them, especially women and priests.

The Iranian Tourist Service is most helpful about providing reliable information and guides. Transportation was cheap — taxi fares fixed by law. After all, even sheep on the way to market can afford them.

CARCASSONNE

The famous walled city of Carcassonne will be featured in "Footloose in France," the Explorerama color travel film coming to Sunset Center auditorium on February 17.

Former British Prime Minister Will Discuss Democracy At MPC

The Right Honorable Sir Alec Douglas-Home, former British prime minister, will speak at Monterey Peninsula College on Saturday. His subject will be "Democracy: Is it Worth it?"

The lecture, free to the public, will begin at 8 p.m. in the Armory on campus.

Sir Alec, eldest son of the 18th Earl of Home and grandson on his mother's side of the 4th Earl of Durham, renounced all his peerages to become prime minister on October 16, 1963. A year later, almost to the day, he was out of office after a narrow defeat at the polls ended 13 years of conservative administration.

His role as prime minister was not a comfortable one. Even before he accepted his appointment he had to put down an intracabinet revolt, and he carried into an election year the burden of his predecessors' mistakes, including the aftermath of the Profumo scandal that had so nearly brought down the Conservative government in mid-1963.

Educated at Eton College and Christ Church, Oxford, Sir Alec was a member of the House of Commons from 1931 to 1945 and again from 1950 to 1951, when he succeeded his father and automatically became a member of the House of Lords. He again became a member of the House of Commons in 1963, and was leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition from October, 1964, until his resignation in July, 1965. He is still a member of the House of Commons. He was made a Knight of the the Order of the Thistle in 1962.

Among other important governmental posts he has held are Minister of State, Scottish Office (1951-55); Secretary of State for Commonwealth relations (1955-60); Deputy Leader of the House of Lords (1956-57); Leader of the House of Lords and Lord President of the Council (1957-60); and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs (1960-63).

Finish each day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities no doubt crept in; forget them as soon as you can. Tomorrow is a new day; begin it well and serenely, and with too high a spirit to be cumbered with your old nonsense. (Emerson)

Free Showing Of Film On Hawaii

The first Monterey Peninsula showing of a colorful Hawaii travel film, "Cruise to Paradise," featuring a cruise from California to Hawaii's four major islands on the famed liner Lurline, will be held February 22 at Sunset Center auditorium.

The program, which starts at 8 p.m., is sponsored by Matson Lines, Aloha Airlines, the Hawaii Visitors Bureau, the Kahala Hilton Hotel and Peninsula area travel agents. Two other films, Aloha's "The Neighbor Isles," and Hilton's "Love of Living at the Kahala," also will be shown. Hawaiian entertainment will complete the program.

Invitations may be obtained without charge from Bob McGinnis Travel Service, Norberg Travel Service and Dick Phinney Tours and Travel in Carmel.

Film On France Here February 17

International explorer and photographer Thayer Soule will appear in person at 8:15 p.m. on February 17 in Sunset Center to narrate his prize-winning color film, "Footloose in France". His program is the first of this year's Explorerama-Carmel series of color travel and adventure films.

Soule has travelled over a million miles in the production of his various travel and adventure films. He graduated from Harvard University in 1939 and became production assistant to Burton Holmes. Mr. Holmes coined the word travelogue, and for over half a century was the world leader in travel photography. Their association continued for 20 years.

In World War II, as a Marine Corps reserve officer, Thayer Soule was ordered to active duty the day after Pearl Harbor. He landed at Guadalcanal as officer in charge of the Marines' first field photographic unit, later headed another unit at Iwo Jima where he won the Bronze Star. At war's end, he was in charge of all Marine Corps photography in the Pacific. He now holds the rank of lieutenant colonel, retired.

His film "Footloose in France," which he will present in Carmel on February 17 has won ten first prize awards at various travel festivals throughout the country. It will be shown here exactly as it was premiered last season for the National Geographic Society in Washington D. C.

Other films in the new series, all with in person narration, are: "Magnificent Greece", March 3; "Incomparable Switzerland", Mar. 17; "Bravo Portugal", March 31; and "The New Russia", April 14.

Series tickets at $6.00 for the five films, also single program tickets at $1.75, are now available at Central Box Office in Carmel. Proceeds of the film series help to provide annual scholarships to young students throughout the country, under the auspices of the Explorers Club of San Francisco.

CONCERT MONDAY NIGHT

The famous Pomona College glee clubs will make their annual presentation to the Stevenson School on Monday at 8 p.m. in Reid Hall. Co-sponsored by RLS and the Santa Catalina School for Girls, the groups will have a total of 50 singers, including the "happy" Blue and White Quartet.

These concert tours have become famous for their stirring performances under the direction of William F. Russell, who is in his 16th year as conductor, also is head of the music department at Pomona. Some of the selections this year will incude the Women's Glee Club in "Laudi alla vergine Maria," one of the few non-operatic works of Verdi; the combined group singing four "intensely expressive" madrigals from Monteverdi's Fourth Book; the Men's Glee Club doing German drinking songs; with Brahms brilliant "Gypsy Songs" as concluding number.

And, of course, the Blue and White Quartet, which is always popular with its light blend of humor and "happy-go-lucky" songs.

The one-time performance will be followed by light refreshments. In addition to RLS and Santa Catalina, the clubs will perform before many high schools, colleges and service clubs in Northern California in the next few days.

HONORS ANNOUNCED

Two boys led with perfect scores, to complete the first half of the school year, as 82 others made the Honor Roll of 90.0 or better. It was a strong academic performance as 24 boys were able to make Faculty Honors (95.0) and some boys just missed honor roll status by 4.0 points or less.

Arlen Chase again led his class and the Lower School with a 100.0 score for his third straight perfect record this year. Heading up the Senior High School was Terry Talbot with the perfect 100.0 score, followed by his debate partner, Robert Howard with 99.0. Basketball stars Art Lara and Eric Haas also made Faculty Honors, as well as the 9th grade debating team of Chris Wrather and Gary Novack, Student Body President Larry Kuechler, debators Lonnie Foy and Bill Kondrat, star soccer player Hok Yin Leung, and sports editor Chris Wentworth, among others.

With 22 freshmen on the honor roll, the 9th grade led all others, as the seniors, juniors and sophomores each had 17 to tie for second. The Lower School (8th) led with the best percentage as 11 of 24 were at 90.0 or better for the first half of the school year. Almost one of three students at the school was able to make the Honor Roll.

Clean Streets Concern Of Business Association

Discussion at the February 2 committee meeting of the Carmel Business Association centered on keeping Carmel's streets clean. Special guests were Fred Cunningham, city building inspector, and John Riling, director of planning. The former presented the city's side of the problem and suggested that merchants cooperate with the city in keeping Carmel beautiful by noting the following points.

1. Since of necessity the street department sweeps the streets early in the morning, and proprietors later sweep sidewalks in front of their places of business, would they please take up the litter instead of sweeping it into the gutters to remain there until the next morning?

2. During summer months, sweeping sidewalks twice a day would be a great help, if the sweepings were taken up.

3. Some proprietors are placing refuse in boxes or paper bags rather than in covered containers and this invites investigation by stray animals.

The business association committee went on record as strongly urging all association members to follow through on the above suggestions for helping to keep the city's streets clean.

The street situation was brought to the attention of the business association in a letter from Planning Commission Chairman Dorothy von Meier. The letter was the result of planning commission discussion after the state of the streets in the business district was brought to its attention by Planning Commissioner Dorothea Roberts.

What's Going on Here?

by B. ROWE

CARMEL FOUNDATION
Town House

On Sunday afternoon, a costumed children's choir will give a concert of popular songs, featuring many from the picture "Mary Poppins". Mrs. C. E. Welchner is their leader. The program starts at 2 p.m. in Town House.

The annual meeting of the Carmel Foundation will be in All Saints' Episcopal Church on March 15. Following the meeting tea will be served at Town House.

The Hat Making Class started Monday and will continue every Monday for six weeks. Time: 10 a.m. Those attending are asked to bring a sandwich and stay all day. Mrs. DeVlaminck is the teacher.

The Wednesday afternoon program on February 15 at Town House will cover a tour of Germany. Herman Volz will show colored slides.

CARMEL HACIENDA

Trophies to the winners of the annual putting tournament will be presented by George Salter, chairman of the tournament committee. Both men and women competed for awards, complete with name inscriptions.

Another tournament, now in the semifinal stage, is for the Ladies Shuffleboard championship with competitive spirit mounting rapidly. Miss Midge Pittman is cooperating with Mrs. Ramona Gahl, chairman, in conducting the tournament. The winning lady will have her name placed on a permanent plaque as the 1966-67 champion.

FOREST HILL MANOR

March 2, Mrs. Fred Ingham of Seattle will give a talk and show slides of her recent trip to Africa. Mr. and Mrs. Ingham spent three and a half months touring and taking pictures. They travelled over 6,000 miles. Some of the places visited included Johannesburg, Durban, Kruger Park, Cecil Rhodes Tomb, Victoria Falls and Cape Town. In certain parts of Africa signs read "Elephants have right of way." An interesting evening is in store for the residents of Forest Hill Manor on this occasion. Mrs. Amalia Hough, a resident of the Manor, arranged the program.

On February 9, Mrs. Helen Oehler of Hacienda Carmel will show slides on the topic, "Dakar to Arabia by way of Timbuktu."

PINPOINT PROFILE
Emma Farnham Luther

We asked Mrs. Emma Luther, aged 93, to what she credited her excellent health and long life. After contemplating a moment she smiled and said, "Well, I guess it was having a hardy childhood — you see, I was born on a farm."

Anyone who has ever lived on a farm knows that her hardy childhood meant getting up early every morning; doing her share of the chores; going to school, sometimes in several feet of snow; returning home to do more chores; eating a hearty dinner; and early to bed. There were no "cokes" and goodies after school. No music stores where one could while away an hour listening to records. No soft carpets to sprawl on while watching TV. These luxuries were unheard of in those days.

When Emma was five years old her father bought a homestead and timberland in Nebraska and moved his family there. This was real pioneering because they had to start from scratch. The family lived in a sod house with walls 12 inches thick and worked hard every day in order to produce raised cattle and hogs. Chickens enough food to live on. They were a real necessity, furnishing both eggs and meat for the table. Crops such as sorghum, squash, corn and wheat were the field crops. These commodities were traded at the village store, eight miles away, for other things — shoes, clothes, tools and so forth.

Way down in her heart Emma always knew that she wanted to be a teacher. When the time came she entered San Jose Normal College (now San Jose State), later taught in several communities in California including the Watsonville area. It was in Watsonville that she met her husband, Arthur. They had two daughters, Angela and Arva. When the children were in their teens Mr. Luther died. The year was 1928. As the years passed the girls graduated from high school and went on to the University of California.

Some years later Mrs. Luther went to live with her sister, Mrs. Seale, on a ranch near Watsonville. Subsequently, after selling the ranch, both sisters came to live at Forest Hill Manor. Here Mrs. Luther keeps busy as a member of the Fourth Estate — she is on the staff of the Manor's monthly bulletin. So if, perchance, you hear her asking a lot of questions you will know what she wants the information for. Quite likely, you will see it in print in the next edition of "Manor-isms."

SPENDING EASTER VACATION DIFFERENTLY

The Ikthys Youth Group (High School) of the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula is going to Ensenada, Mexico, for Easter Week. There they will build a stone wall around one of the churches and conduct a vacation bible school for the children of the church. It is a worthwhile Easter project for them.

The Complete Gardener

. . . a regular diet of information having to do with plants

GROWING VEGETABLES

Just as in building a house, a well executed plan is all-important when planting the garden. Make your mistakes on paper, if you will, where they may easily be corrected. Cross-section paper, 10 squares per inch, will be simple and accurate. Outline the borders of the plot you've set aside for vegetables. Short-term crops can be planted early and followed by others in the same soil. These are lettuce, spinach, radishes, carrots, beans, beets, peas, turnips and early cabbage. Vegetables which require the least space are lettuce, radishes, carrots, beets, onions, beans and tomatoes. Those needing the most space are corn, potatoes, peas, cucumbers, melons, squash, cabbage, cauliflower and broccoli. Biggest yields will come from tomatoes, beans, onions, carrots, beets, radishes, spinach, turnips and cabbage. Hard-to-grow vegetables include cauliflower, peas, celery, potatoes, spinach, squash and melons.

From these lists you can narrow your selection to those you like and work them into your plan. If you're growing tall crops, such as corn, place them on the north side of your garden to prevent shading the lower plants. Now it's time to fit your selection into your space. Make a list of planting dates and maturity dates, which will be found on all seed packets. By following a good plan you'll have a productive garden.

ROSES

In most of our Central Coast area a rose is a rose and most varieties do well. These are the locations where heat and sunshine are plentiful. What about the cooler, foggy spots? Mildew problems occur and some rose blooms fail to open. This situation calls for a narrower selection, but the milder winter offers the advantage of longer blooming. For the fogbound rose fancier we suggest the two most popular roses of all time: Peace and Tropicana, also Pink Parfait, Duet, Rapture, Chicago Peace and Prima Ballerina.

FRUIT TREES

After fruit trees are pruned and the trash cleared away, the occasion calls for a final dormant spraying. Do the pears and apples as the first buds break open but before the leaves are ¼-inch long. Cherries and peaches must be sprayed before the buds swell. On plums, watch for the small fruit and spray just as the husks start to split.

It should be noted here that good pruning practices can be greatly responsible for the quality of the crop. Peach trees are prolific bearers and much thinning is necessary. Some thinning can take place as the trees are being pruned. Twigs that are 18 inches long and well-supplied with fruit buds may be cut back to 12 inches. Overloaded trees produce smaller fruits and become weak from the great effort. Often the weight of the crop splits the limbs. Pruning and thinning are important. So is feeding. This week is a perfect time to feed trees. One planting tablet for each ½-inch of trunk diameter, or a mixed fertilizer in dry form, can be placed in holes around the dripline.

Check with us next week for a word about hedges.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"What man is he that desireth life, and loveth many days, that he may see good?" (Psalms 34:12) finds an affirmative response in the hearts of all men.

Christian Science churches, studying the subject "Soul" Sunday, will hear as correlative passages Jeremiah's prophecy: "Ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart," and from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy: "Through spiritual sense only, man comprehends and loves Deity."

On this basis may be found the answer to mankind's yearning for a better life.

Renowned Pianist Leon Fleisher To Be Symphony Soloist Tuesday

World-renowned pianist Leon Fleisher will make one of his few California appearances on Tuesday in Sunset Center auditorium as guest soloist with the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra and Conductor John Gosling.

Fleisher presented his first piano recital at the age of six and studied with one of the masters of the keyboard—Arthur Schnabel—for ten years. He won the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Music Competition in 1952, making his orchestral debut with the late Pierre Monteux and the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Monteux also presented him with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and at Tanglewood.

Highlights of his musical career include a command performance at the White House; soloist for the inaugural concerts at Lincoln Center; the world premiere of a new concerto written for him by Leon Kirchner; appearances with Japanese conductor Seji Ozawa and the Montreal Symphony Orchestra; George Szell and the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra; and Josef Krips at the Hollywood Bowl.

During Tuesday evening's program, he will play Ravel's "Concerto for the Left Hand Alone". Written in 1929, the composer described the work by saying, ". . . (it) has only one movement with many jazz effects; the writing is not so simple."

Continuing in the 20th century vein, the string section of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra will present "Serenade for Strings, Op. 20" by Elgar, which is representative of one of England's great periods of music.

Conductor John Gosling will then take concertgoers on a tour of Italy via Respighi's "The Pines of Rome". Listeners will have an opportunity to visit the pine trees of the Villa Borghese, near a catacomb, pine trees of the Janiculum and of the Appian Way.

Tickets for this exciting musical adventure can be obtained at the Monterey County Symphony Association, by calling 624-4125.

Art News . . .

The Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art Association is offering an exhibition of interest to which the visually handicapped are extended a special welcome. The exhibition entitled "Please Touch" will consist of sculpture, painting and crafts of tactile quality. All visitors to the gallery will be invited to appreciate through their fingers the works of various artists. The exhibition, with the help of Braille labels done by the Braille Institute of Pacific Grove, will demonstrate that visual impression alone is not sufficient for full comprehension of certain art objects.

The museum, on Lincoln south of Ocean, will be open for this new and exciting experience from February 14 through 28. The hours will be 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday.

The fourth annual Religious Art Show, sponsored by the Roman Catholic Chapel Guild of the U. S. Naval Postgraduate School, remains on display in the school's ballroom through Sunday.

The current exhibit of the Carmel Crafts Guild in the Harrison Memorial Library features the stoneware of Gerald Allen.

Allen's interest in ceramic art was stimulated in 1951 while he was attending College of Marin. He was, however, unable to pursue this interest for some years due to military obligations. In 1962, Allen came to the Monterey Peninsula to live and shortly after enrolled in the pottery class of the Carmel Adult School. Under the able instruction of Robert Lynn, he has found potting his preferred medium of artistic expression.

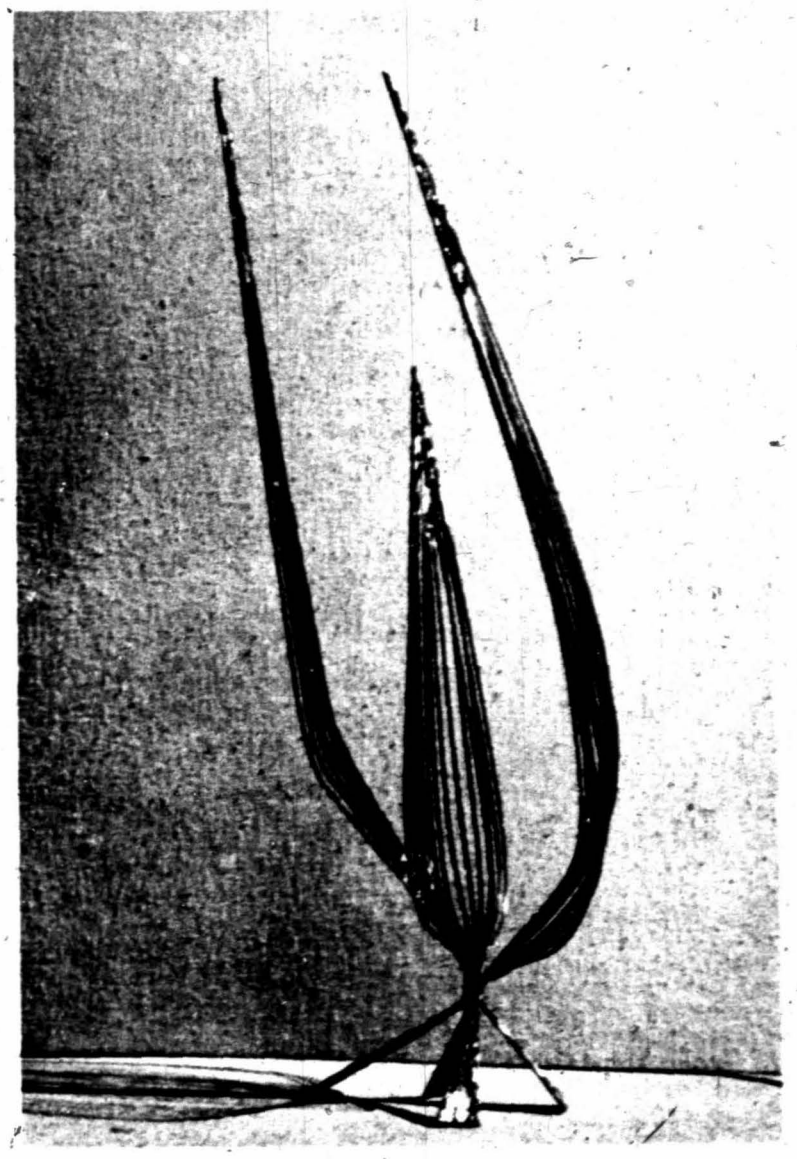
The stoneware pieces on exhibit demonstrate his artistic skill and his versatility in the use of glazes —from the ancient Japanese horonobou to a newly developed burnt orange glaze.

Gerald Allen, recently elected to the second vice-presidency of the Carmel Crafts Guild, will be in charge of the guild's exhibit at the annual Monterey County Fair.

Portraits by Virginia Conroy and sculptures by Rozika Vitarius are being shown at the New Monterey Neighborhood Center, Lighthouse and Dickman Streets, through February. The exhibition is open daily, except weekends, from 2-5 p.m.

Mrs. Anna Burgess of Carmel Valley was awarded a $50 prize in the weaving category of the CRAFTS TODAY I exhibition at Museum West of the American Craftsmen's Council, Ghirardelli Square, in San Francisco. Out of 2,000 entries, judges accepted only 150. Mrs. Burgess' two entries are both included in the show. One is a flossa rug and the other, which is the prize winner, is a woven hanging with various types of feathers incorporated in the weave. The show will be on view until February 16, and will be followed by a second section which will be open to the public from February 26-March 12.

Born in Hawaii, Mrs. Burgess, the former Anna Kang, is a graduate of the University of Hawaii and Cranbrook Academy of Art. She has taught at both the University of Hawaii and the Cleveland Institute of Art, also has acted as a designer for Dorothy Liebes in New York City. She has been a frequent exhibitor in national shows, including several at the Museum of Contemporary Crafts in New York. Last August she and her husband opened ORIGINS, a handcraft and weaving shop in Carmel Valley Village.



TRAYLOR DUNWOODY SCULPTURE

The sculpture above is included in the one-man show of paintings and sculpture by Traylor Dunwoody now on exhibition in the Beardsley Room at the Carmel Art Association Galleries.

Poetry Column

SIRIUS

When your blue rays seemed to awake
The still green serpent of the Nile,
They worshipped you in that old land
Of pyramid and crocodile.

And, later, were you not the star
That rose in splendor in the East?
That led the dazzled Magi on
To shrine of straw and Babe and beast?

But now your lustrous gem is dimmed
Above where modern cities lie;
Obscured by blinding neon lights
You glimmer in the jet-torn sky.

Though man would conquer space and time,
Few know your beauty and your fame,
And few but dreaming poets know
The glory of your awesome name.

HAVE YOU THOUGHT OF A LITTLE PLACE IN THE SUN

Where you could hide away when things get Too Much, yet which is only secluded from people, not umpteen miles away from them? Try these for sighs!

JUST FAR ENOUGH UP THE VALLEY

-to be out of the fog, a great little house for YOU, plus a complete, adorable guest cottage which you can rent if you're serious about getting away from people and don't want guests. Both little houses are interesting, immaculate, one bedroom, completely and very nicely furnished. They are hidden at the end of a country lane in a setting of beautiful trees and shrubs. Only $28,500 for both doll houses. Great for income or your own adventures.

DELIGHTFUL A-FRAME behind a tall privacy fence which encloses a patio of wall-to-wall brick surfacing and choice, low-maintenance plantings. Located a little way beyond the Valley Village, it was built by an architect for his vacation pleasure. You can start enjoying your sun-spot immediately, too, because it is completely and nicely furnished. Price is only $15,000 and the owner will carry financing himself. (Yes, that's right: only $15,000.)

PROBABLY THE MOST INTERESTING SMALL FULL-TIME HOME in the Carmel Valley. Only a couple of blocks from the shops, it is hidden away from sight and sound of the Village and looks toward the glorious Santa Lucias through interesting picture windows, or louvred and clerestory windows. It also has a brook in the living room, circular stone walls, rustic beams, skylighted studio, complete photo darkroom, lots of built-in things like bookshelves and stereo. And it's a view you didn't know you could have unless you were on top of a mountain on the north side of the Valley. Price is $42,500 for this very special home.

OR BUILD YOUR OWN RETREAT

We have five really exceptional sites right now, all with lovely oaks, interesting rock outcroppings to appeal to your landscaping bent, and those always incredible, panoramic views of the close and far mountains. Prices range from $12,500 (this one is really a bargain) to $18,500. Without trees, we can even give you several choices under $10,000.

TEEING OFF with Bill O'Malley

Letter To Editor

Editor,
Carmel Pine Cone

This letter was written 30 minutes after the near-drowning of a woman on the Carmel Point Beach on February 2.

After being notified that she had been swept out, I placed a call to the Fire and Rescue Squad of Carmel Highlands. I was informed that the Carmel Point Beach is under the jurisdiction of the Carmel Rescue Squad and that I should call there.

Fortunately, I happened to have two dimes in my pocket, as the phone adjacent to the beach is a pay phone.

I live within two blocks of this beach, on Carmelo. During October I placed an emergency call to the Carmel Police Department and was referred to the Carmel Highlands section.

To avert a future tragedy, I suggest that the correct telephone number be posted in bold-face letters in plain view of the caller, on this and every public phone located near the beaches. The only listing at this time is the long column on the inside cover of the local phone directory. I further suggest that the Carmel/Carmel Highlands line of demarcation be made clear to the residents therein.
